where; how he kept busy, one hand writ-ing deeds to property and the other on the public pulse.

"How have I made a success of this home building business? By ascertaining just what people want; calling their at-tention to it, and showing them how to get it in the easiest and cheapest man-ner.

ner. "Every man wants a home. It is the dearest wish of every heart. Not a rented house, but one of his own. So we started by asking "the question: "Whose roof is over your head." Ever ask yourself that? Well, you know how it wakes one up.

started by asking the question: 'Whose roof is over your head?' Ever ask yourself that? Well, you know how it wakes one up.

"When a man realizes that he has no home he makes further inquiries. There is where we do business with him. We can demonstrate to him how to get the very best for the money, on the easiest terms. Time was when a man who wanted a home joined a building association. He took so many shares of stock and besan making payments. Paid rent all the time he was doing it, but every month he walked to the office and deposited his cash. The board of directors farmed it out, drew interest on it, paid salaries and expenses out of it, and finally, after the fellow had grown gray, if the board was willing, he got a loan, signed an ironclad set of papers and settled down to work hquidating. Sometimes he paid for the place (if he was healthy and came from a long lived family) and sometimes he did not. The interest, like Cascarets worked while he slept, and he had a hard time of it.

"Now, when we find a man who wants a home we arrange it so that he can get it right away. We build him a new house, just the way he wants it, all ready to move into. He quits paying rent in the old place and has his money to apply on the new home. The interest isn't 8 per cent, but 7, and easy payment reduces the interest to be paid so that it averages only about 4 per cent on the term of the loan. The first thing the man knows he owns his home.

"We make a specialty of new homes. Why? Because no man wants an old house. An old house, costs nearly as much per year in taxes as a new one and it is always in need of repairs. People sell old houses to get the money to build new ones. Everybody wants a new house. Then why not have a new one in debt and on account of taxes, special assessments and the interest which accumulates on the investment.

Actually the cost of land doubles every six years, if you figure 7 per cent compound interest on the purchase price and add the taxes. For instance, land which cost you side a rod six years ago must be sold for $200 a rod to get out even.

There is only one safe and feasible way to carry property, and that is to improve it with suitable buildings and use the income to keep your skirts clear of financial embarrassment.

"The Reavis System" of home building provides the only safe plan whereby owners of vacant land can improve it with buildings, without paying any cash down.

A special feature is the partial payments agreement, whereby any part or all of the loan can be paid at any time, thus reducing the interest to about 4 per cent.

"The Reavis System" arranges the monthly payments so that the income from the improvements pays both interest and principal.

Another feature, granted at your option, provides that if the borrower dies, the loan is fully satisfied at death—a splendid protection for a man's widow.

Don't read this announcement and then forget the object it teaches—the economic necessity of improving your vacant land—but make up your mind to act at once and investigate the practical and beneficent plan of "The Reavis System."
